A Romanian family who hid $57,768 in a pair of old shoes, then threw them away by mistake, has recovered some of its savings. A man from Alba Iulia hid the savings in the shoes without telling his wife, who cleaned house before Christmas and threw the shoes away. The couple informed police, who discovered that a woman had found the shoes — and bought a house. The family recovered about $18,000 from the woman and about $27,000 from the sellers. (AP)

Police in Kansas City, Mo., are looking for a woman who went on a rampage at a McDonald’s because she didn’t like her hamburger. Police say the woman caused thousands of dollars in damage on Dec. 27 when the restaurant wouldn’t refund her money. Police released a video (available on YouTube) showing the woman throwing a sign and a bucket of water over the counter and pushing a glass display case and three cash registers onto the floor. She then cursed and fled. (AP)

The bomb was designed to detonate "at a time of his choosing," the grand jury's indictment said.

Abdulmutallab faces up to life in prison if convicted of attempting to use a bomb on the plane. He will make his first appearance in federal court on Friday for an arraignment and a hearing to determine if he stays in custody. ED WHITE (AP)

An Emotional Dodd Steps Aside

Powerful lawmaker leaving Senate after 35 years in office

Washington

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., formally announced Wednesday that he will not seek re-election to the Senate this year, saying that "none of us is irreplaceable" and that it was time to "step aside."

In a brief speech outside his home in East Haddam, Conn., Dodd said that after representing the people of his state in Congress for 35 years, "I will not be a candidate for reelection this November."

Although he said he loves his job as senator, the past year has "raised challenges that insisted I take stock of my life." He cited the strain of managing four major pieces of legislation, serving as chairman or acting chairman of two major Senate committees, losing his sister and one of his closest Senate colleagues — Edward M. Kennedy — and battling cancer.

"And in the midst of all this, I found myself in the toughest political shape of my career," Dodd said, acknowledging polls that showed he would have faced a difficult reelection campaign.

Word of Dodd's plans leaked on Tuesday after Sen. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., announced he would not seek reelection.

Republicans, for their part, revelled in the retirement of Dodd and other Democrats.

"I'm very proud of the job I've done. ... But none of us is irreplaceable."

In addition to Dodd and Dorgan, Republican National Committee Chairman Michael S. Steele noted in a statement Wednesday afternoon, Michigan Lt. Gov. John Cherry, Colorado Gov. Bill Ritter and four House Democrats have decided not to run again this year.

"These should serve as a major wakeup call to Democrat leadership that members of their own caucus don't want to be held accountable to the voters they have ignored for the past year," Steele said.

LAND OF THE FROST

A persistent actic chill tightened its grip on the nation Wednesday and reached deep into the South, where it was blamed for at least five deaths and threatened to freeze crops and bring snow to places more accustomed to winter sunshine. It was so cold in central and south Florida, freezing iguanas were seen falling from trees. Authorities said four people in Tennessee and one in Mississippi have died from the cold since the weekend. IRS Phone Help Faulted

Agency: 3 of 10 calls to toll-free line won't reach representative

Washington

Need help with your taxes? Good luck reaching the IRS. Three out of 10 people who call the toll-free help line this tax season won't get through to a human being — and that's if the agency meets its goals for service.

Callers lucky enough to get through will have to wait on hold an average of nearly 12 minutes, a level of service deemed unacceptable in a report by National Taxpay-

The number of calls the IRS received on its toll-free help line in 2009. A large portion of the calls were about new tax breaks passed by Congress.

er Advocate Nina E. Olson.

Such poor service "will cause problems for taxpayers and the IRS alike, as some taxpayers give up and don't bother to file or they make avoidable errors that the IRS then must devote resources toward resolving," said Olson, an independent watchdog within the IRS.

Olson issues a report each year to Congress highlighting the most serious problems encountered by taxpayers in their dealings with the IRS. This year, poor phone service topped the list.

The IRS said it has been inundated with an unprecedented number of calls the past two years from taxpayers with questions about temporary tax breaks passed by Congress to help revive the economy.

To help, the agency has upgraded its Web site, posting answers to frequent questions.

The agency's goal is to connect 71 percent of callers to a real person in 2010, down from a recent high of 87 percent in 2004.

A Japanese whaling ship strikes the Ady Gil in Antarctica waters Wednesday.

Group Says Whalers Hit Its Vessel Deliberately

Sydney

A conservation group's boat had its bow sheared off and was taking on water Wednesday after it was struck by a Japanese whaling ship in the frigid waters off Antarctica, the group said.

The boat's six crew members were safely transferred to another of the Sea Shepherd Conservation Society's vessels, the newly commissioned Bob Barker— named for the American game show host who donated $5 million to buy it.

The clash was the most serious in the past several years, during which the Sea Shepherd has sent vessels into far-southern waters to try to harass the Japanese fleet into ceasing its annual whale hunt.

Clashes using hand-thrown stink bombs, ropes meant to tangle propellers and high-tech sound equipment have been common in recent years, and crashes between ships have sometimes occurred.

The society accused the Japanese ship of deliberately ramming its vessel, the Ady Gil. "There's no question they steered directly at us," Pete Bethune, The Ady Gil's skipper, told New Zealand's National Radio. ROHAN SULLIVAN (AP)

Yemen Opposes Foreign Troops

FM says U.S. should stay out of the fight against al-Qaeda

Sanaa, Yemen

Yemen's foreign minister said Wednesday that his country opposes any direct intervention by U.S. or other foreign troops in the fight against al-Qaeda.

Foreign Minister Abu Bakr al-Qirbi told The Associated Press in an interview that "there is a lot of sensitivity about foreign troops coming to Yemeni territory."

But Al-Qirbi added that Yemen's government would welcome more military trainers, "but not in any other capacity."

His comments came as Yemeni security forces launched a manhunt for the suspected leader of an al-Qaeda cell believed to be behind a threatened attack that forced the closure this week of the U.S. and British embassies in Sanaa.

Security forces swept into several areas where the militant, Mohammed Ahmed al-Hanaq, was believed to be hiding in the

Suspected U.S. Drone Strikes Kill 13 in Pakistan

Islamabad

Two suspected U.S. drone missile strikes killed at least 13 people Wednesday in an area of Pakistan's volatile northwest teeming with militants suspected in a recent suicide attack that killed seven CIA employees in Afghanistan, intelligence officials said.

The lawless North Waziristan tribal area hit Wednesday is home to several militant groups that stage cross-border attacks against coalition troops, including the al-Qaeda-linked Haqqani network. Counting the latest strikes, suspected U.S. drones have attacked North Waziristan five times since the CIA bombing a week ago, killing at least 20 people.

The Obama administration has pressed Pakistan to crack down on the Haqqani network, but Islamabad has resisted, saying it has its hands full battling local Taliban militants waging war against the state. In response, Washington has stepped up drone strikes near the Afghan border. (AP)

Irish Angered Over 'Silly' Airport Test

Bratislava, Slovakia

A failed airport security test ended up with a Slovak man unwittingly carrying hidden explosives in his luggage on a flight to Dublin, Slovak officials admitted Wednesday — a mistake that enraged Irish authorities and shocked aviation experts worldwide.

While the Slovaks blamed the incident on "a silly and unprofessional mistake," Irish officials and security experts said it was foolish for the Slovaks to hide bomb parts in the luggage of innocent passengers under any circumstances.

The passenger, 49-year-old electrician Stefan Gonda, was detained by Irish police for several hours before being let go without charge Tuesday.

The Irish were also angry that it took the Slovaks three days to tell them about the Saturday mistake and that the pilot of the airplane decided to fly to Dublin anyway even after being told that an explosive was in his aircraft's checked luggage.

The incident was bound to heighten flying jitters in the wake of the Christmas near-disaster near Detroit. (AP)

A Close Call for Metro Inspectors

Report: Full-speed train nearly struck officials last month

Washington

A team of independent safety inspectors was nearly hit last month by a Metro train that appeared to be traveling at full speed and made no attempt to slow, as required by agency rules.

A report released late Wednesday by the body that oversees Metro says the inspectors "experienced a near-miss situation" and that they "were forced to scramble out of the way to avoid being struck."

Tri-State Oversight Committee monitors investigate Metro's safety protocols.

No one was injured in the incident, according to the report by the Tri-State Oversight Committee.

The team was working to see whether track worker protections were being followed and whether trains were slowing and stopping as required when they approached people on the tracks.

The Dec. 10 incident happened just days after Metro lifted a six month ban and allowed safety inspectors to once again have access to operating subway tracks.

The inspectors said train operators failed to respond to hand signals from track personnel and that Metro's control center failed to give operators adequate warning about where workers were stationed on the tracks. In addition, the report said inspectors detected antagonism between track workers and train operators. JOE STEPHENS AND LENA H. SUN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Mike Shanahan begins the task of remaking the Redskins in his own image

The Redskins

In the days after he was fired as the coach and executive vice president of the Denver Broncos last winter, Mike Shanahan took an office not far from the team's complex. He staffed it with his longtime personal assistant and set up the room as if he was still a coach, installing television screens and a tape machine.

He devised a way to have piles of coaching-quality game films delivered to the office and dedicated five to six hours of each day to evaluating players, breaking down offenses and searching for new ways to respond to the latest defensive trends.

"He wants a place where he could shower, get dressed and go to work," said his longtime friend Les Shapiro, a radio host in Denver. "It's easy to bang around the house and wear sweats. He wants to work."

To those who know him, the office is the essence of Shanahan, who is the Redskins' new head coach and executive vice president of football operations: a man so obsessed with detail that he draws plays on napkins even when dining out. Most coaches take vacations when they leave the NFL. Shanahan instead acted as if he never left, traveling to Florida to study Urban Meyer's spread offense and to New England to watch how Patriots Coach Bill Belichick ran his operation.

An intensity burns in Shanahan, 57, that is unique even in a league of meglomaniac coaches. He is not a tall man, standing 5-foot-9, yet his compulsion about the smallest components and his demands that everything be perfect, create an air of rigid formality.

"There's no casual with Coach Shanahan," said Paul Kirk, the Broncos' former media director who now runs the Denver-based public relations firm ProLink Sports. "You come prepared and you don't make excuses."

As Broncos coach, the powers given him by team owner Pat Bowlen were so wide-ranging and encompassed so much that he installed video cameras in every Broncos meeting room so he could watch position meetings on a multi-window screen in his office just to make sure each coach taught the proper principles.

Such obsession led to two Broncos Super Bowl victories. It made Shanahan such a beloved figure in Denver that he recently opened a steak house there and is still affectionately known around town as "the Mastermind."

But his thirst for power and a confidence in his own coaching brilliance led him to make bad player decisions, ultimately fracturing relationships inside the Denver front office. He won only one playoff game in the 10 years after the last Super Bowl, helped get the team fined twice for salary cap violations, then was fired after an 8-8 season in 2008.

Some wonder if he will have the same trouble in Washington, with Redskins owner Daniel Snyder and general manager Bruce Allen, who also shares the title of executive vice president with Shanahan. But people close to Shanahan say Shanahan was assured by former Redskins coach Joe Gibbs that Snyder would stay in the background and let Shanahan run the organization.

Allen is seen around the league as more of a salary cap specialist. Shanahan recommended Allen to Snyder, according to people with knowledge of the situation, believing him to be someone who would mostly stay out of his way.

Meaning that Shanahan should get in Washington what he seemed to crave once he left the Broncos: the power to remake another team in his image. LES CARPENTER (THE WASHINGTON POST)

His Resume

The 57-year-old Mike Shanahan has built a career record of 154-103 as a head coach.

1988 Shanahan is hired to coach the Los Angeles Raiders at age 35. He was fired early in his second season with a 8-12 record after clashing with owner Al Davis for much of his tenure.

1994 Shanahan is in his third-year as offensive coordinator for the San Francisco 49ers when the team, led by QB Steve Young, wins the Super Bowl.

1995 Shanahan is hired as head coach of the Denver Broncos, where he landed his first NFL job at age 32 as the team's wide receivers coach and where he worked as quarterback coach for two years after his failed stint with the Raiders.

1998 The Broncos beat the Green Bay Packers to win the first of two consecutive Super Bowl titles under QB John Elway.

2008 Shanahan is fired by the Broncos, having won just one playoff game since Elway retired in 1999.

Arenas Suspended Indefinitely

Gun joke nets huge NBA penalty for the Wizards' star guard

The Wizards

Gilbert Arenas was suspended without pay Wednesday by NBA commissioner David Stern, who determined the player's behavior made him "not currently fit to take the court."

A day after the Washington Wizards guard was photographed before a game in Philadelphia pointing his index fingers, as if they were guns, at his teammates, Stern warned the former All-Star that his conduct will "ultimately result in a substantial suspension, and perhaps worse."

Arenas is under investigation by federal and local authorities after admittedly bringing guns to the locker room. Stern originally planned to wait to take action, but he tired of the player's behavior.

Arenas met with law enforcement officials Monday and said the next day that he feared Stern more than the authorities because the commissioner was "mean." With each game he misses, Arenas will lose about $147,200 of the $16.2 million he will earn this season in the second of a six-year, $111 million contract. The punishment came on his 28th birthday.

A Wizards spokesman said Arenas left the team, which is playing in Cleveland, earlier Wednesday but didn't know where he was going. "It's sad," Wizards guard DeShawn Stevenson said. "You don't want to see a player go down like that. We're a family, and it hurts."

The Wizards supported Stern's decision in a statement attributed to president Ernie Grunfeld and the Pollin family, which

This picture of Gilbert Arenas pretending to shoot his teammates Tuesday night may have sped up the NBA's suspension.

"Although it is clear that the actions of Mr. Arenas will ultimately result in a substantial suspension, and perhaps worse, his ongoing conduct has led me to conclude that he is not currently fit to take the court in an NBA game. Accordingly, I am suspending Mr. Arenas indefinitely, without pay, effective immediately."

NBA COMMISSIONER DAVID STERN, who grew weary of Gilbert Arenas' antics while under investigation for keeping his guns in the Wizards' locker room.

owns the team. The late Abe Pollin changed the team's name from the Bullets because of the violent connotation.

"Strictly legal issues aside, Gilbert's recent behavior and statements, including his actions and statements last night in Philadelphia, are unacceptable," the statement said. "Some of our other players appeared to find Gilbert's behavior in Philadelphia amusing. This is also unacceptable. Under Abe Pollin's leadership, our organization never tolerated such behavior, and we have no intention of ever doing so."

A lawyer representing Arenas in the gun matter did not immediately respond to a request for comment. Arenas does not have a traditional player agent. (AP)

Apologies

Arenas Speaks

Gilbert Arenas took a remorseful tone after learning of his suspension from the NBA. In a statement he released late Wednesday, the All-Star point guard said: "I feel very badly that my actions have caused the NBA to suspend me, but I understand why the league took this action. I put the NBA in a negative light and let down my teammates and my fans." Arenas reiterated that the incident with teammate Javaris Crittenton was intended as a practical joke, but he now knows that he used "terrible judgment." (EXPRESS)

Reliever Matt Capps and the Washington Nationals have finalized their $3.5 million, one-year contract. He was 4-8 with a 5.80 ERA and 27 saves in 32 chances last season, striking out 46 in 54 1-3 innings. Capps can earn an additional $425,000 in performance bonuses for games finished under the deal. Texas coach Mack Brown and Alabama coach Nick Saban will face off on Thursday.

Longhorns Hope To Repeat History

College Football

On Thursday night at the Rose Bowl, an underdog Big 12 team quarterbacked by a Heisman Trophy finalist will square off in the Bowl Championship Series title game against this season's most dominating squad, which is led by its Heisman-winning tailback. This plot line may sound all too familiar to college football fans.

Four years after quarterback Vince Young guided Texas to a surprising BCS title game victory over Southern California in Pasadena, Calif., another Longhorns team has an opportunity to repeat history. Sort of.

This time, No. 2 Texas (13-0) will face No. 1 Alabama (13-0) for the BCS title. Thanks in large part to a stingy defense and the prolific runs of tailback Mark Ingram, the Crimson Tide made its way through the regular season mostly unchallenged and has been the clear favorite since the pairing was announced a month ago.

While Crimson Tide Coach Nick Saban attempted to keep reporters from asking his players about their title aspirations, Texas Coach Mack Brown was busy assuring reporters that his group — led by quarterback Colt McCoy — deserved to be the Crimson Tide's opponent.

"The biggest thing, though, is that these kids have earned the right to be here," Brown said. "They have won 13 games. They have worked really hard. The coaches' poll and the [Associated Press] poll at the first of the year thought that they would be good enough to get here, and they have been. All they need to do now is make sure that they continue to do what they did."

Peter Earnest, the founding executive director of the International Spy Museum and veteran of the CIA, didn't want "The Real Spy's Guide to Becoming a Spy," co-written with Suzanne Harper, to be too juvenile. Sure, the how-to guide is meant to encourage youth to get involved in the intelligence profession, but it's not a kiddie book. The guide is supposed to appeal to people with serious intelligence inclinations, a world Earnest was part of for more than three decades. From 25 years as a case officer to time spent as the CIA's director of media relations, Earnest has seen the CIA from nearly every angle, and he'll discuss his experiences and how they shaped "The Real Spy's Guide to Becoming A Spy" at the Borders in Fairfax on Saturday.

How did you walk the line in writing a serious book for kids?

The book is illustrated, there's sort of a humorous and lightness there that's geared to the younger person, but ... it tries hard not to talk down.

So, how did you go about writing the book?

As dealing with terrorism goes on and there's an interest in young people considering [intelligence] as a career, their parents always ask me, "What should my child study?" As if you can nail that right down off the bat. ... But Suzanne drafted what would come closest to what we were talking about, and I would make corrections and add some of my own writing, and it would go back and forth.

Were there any sections that were your favorites to write?

One of the things that came up

COURTESY INTERNATIONAL SPY MUSEUM

Peter Earnest

AUTHOR, 'THE REAL SPY'S GUIDE TO BECOMING A SPY'

invariably is people who get very confused and ask, "What is a spy? What do you call a spy?" And I tried to lay out some clear definitions — what does an analyst do?

what does a case officer do? — that were more than just academic definitions.

Why do you think this kind of book

"People ... get very confused and ask, 'What is a spy?' ... I try to lay out some clear definitions."

is necessary?

This is [about] the need for our country to have the best in the intelligence discipline ... getting the best minds at work together on the challenge of the terrorist threat. And for that, I think this book is very relevant to our world — I think it's important to interest younger people, and I think this is one form of public service. There's a real need for having really good people in there, and the events of the last few days — with the terrorist attempt on that flight — certainly brings that home. ROXANA HADADI

Harajuku's Posers and Players

The Textile Museum explores the world of an extravagant style

Out & About

"You got the wicked style," Gwen Stefani sang in 2004. How right she was.

No style slouch herself, Stefani spotted the meticulously calculated frippery among sets and subsets of costume-loving young people as a trend that would extend its frilly tentacles into high the world of couture and influence outrageousness in other cultures.

But Japan being, well, Japan, the

To give Westerners a glimpse into what not to wear to a job interview, the Textile Museum presents "Harajuku Japanese Street," a demonstration and fashion show that will function like a miniature Harajuku district. Folks dressed to impress will walk the runway, experts will discuss the finer points of Japanese street style and those with a yearning to indulge their Gothic Lolita side can even attend a tutorial on the style.

Greg Triggs, Rachel Korowitz, Canedy Knowles, David Chernicoff and Deb Rabbai kick off a Chicago City Limits performance with a blues number — complete with shades.

Think Fast!

What's so funny? Improv Chicago City Limits' 'Wikiphobia' has all the answers

Out & About

The name may sound misleading, but New York's longest-running comedy troupe, Chicago City Limits, is no joke. Their newest tour, "Wikiphobia," takes aim at Internet culture and the increasingly confusing world of online news media through their trademark musical comedic improv. The show begins with a word from the audience and a bluesy piano lick, and what happens next is anybody's guess.

Touring CCL performer David Chernicoff explained, "I think the high-wire act of improv has a lot of appeal. You can prepare skills and you can prepare as a group, but you always start from scratch and you always start from something different. When the scene starts, the audience knows as much as the performer about what's going to happen."

Chernicoff has been cracking jokes in public since high school, and came to CCL as a producer two years ago. He worked his way into the touring company as a performer shortly thereafter, and loves working for the company in particular because of its broad appeal.

"The CCL show is fun for everybody, and you don't have to bring a lot of comedy literacy to the table to appreciate what we're doing and find our show funny," he said. "I've seen a lot of stuff in New York that's really, really good with a high degree of difficulty and really satisfying, but I think would be a lot harder for somebody who's new to improv to get what's going on at all."

As a comedian, Chernicoff is no elitist, "There are a lot of purists in the comedy world who like one fearless; you have to be focused. You have to be ready to fail a certain percentage of the time. Even the best improvisers in the world do scenes every so often that don't get off the ground — it's an inherent risk in the craft. It's an approach that leads you to grow and become more confident."

Improv's singular quality is the connection forged by the creative process between the performers

"You don't have to bring a lot of comedy literacy to the table to appreciate what we're doing."

specific thing or only like what they do," said Chernicoff. "But I'm an equal opportunity laugher."

Chernicoff has a deep respect for the art of improv in particular. It has pushed him to new levels as a performer and he recognized the challenge, noting, "You have to be and the audiences. "It's a form that lends itself to communicating with people very directly. You're in the same room with them, and you see how they react and feel that immediately," he said.

As the show travels around the country, it changes based on who's watching.

"There are scenes in our show when we're constantly going to the audience for suggestions, and at that point, there are differences from one crowd to the other — whether it's regional, or whether you've got a younger audience or an older audience, a smaller audience or a larger audience. Around D.C., you may have a more politically minded audience, and around Silicon Valley, you've got people with tech on the brain. All of those things tend to seep into the show through the fact that we're accepting suggestions."

Differences in location can make for pretty disparate suggestions. "There are some crowds where you'll ask them for a word and they'll say, 'Potato,' and there are some crowds where you'll ask them for a word and they'll say 'Joe Biden,'" said Chernicoff.

After performing in D.C. last year, he noticed the District tends to have "a pretty savvy and well-informed crowd as far as current events, which is not surprising, given the place. They're more likely to consume more topical humor, there are more, 'Daily Show,' 'Colbert [Report],' and 'SNL' viewers. I think they come to a comedy show and say, 'Oh, I'm going to a comedy show; maybe they're going to do some jokes about the health care bill.'"

But after that, what happens onstage is as unpredictable as, well, the future of the health care bill.

"Lately, I seem to wind up playing a lot of talking animals," said Chernicoff. "At a show in New York a couple of weeks ago, I was a pig, and the story was about a pig giving birth to 10 baby pigs. So, I birthed one other guy 10 times in rapid succession."

With improv, anything is possible. "It can get pretty silly, but it's the nature of the beast," Chernicoff said. "You're doing your best to follow up and build on what came before, and sometimes you wind up being a sow nursing a good friend." RYAN LITTLE

The gospel group Blind Boys of Alabama put its vocal-harmonic spin on songs from the church as well as the street.

Best Faith Forward

The Blind Boys of Alabama keep gospel fresh by hooking up with secular stars

Music

Make no mistake: The Blind Boys of Alabama are as committed to the church and to gospel music as they have ever been, but there's nothing wrong with bringing a little secular music into the fold.

And thus, for the better part of the last decade, the Blind Boys have worked with musicians as diverse as Tom Waits, Ben Harper and Randy Travis.

"You have to change with the times," lead vocalist Jimmy Carter said.

"We are a traditional gospel group — when secular guys come to us most of them have come out of the church [at some point]. It's not that we're trying to deviate from what we're doing — we're still going to do gospel music; we're not going to change."

The group, whose members are a mix of older and younger men with and without sight, celebrates its willingness to embrace these opportunities on its latest album, "Duets." The 14-song anthology — a mix of new and old — features collaborations with Bonnie Raitt, Toots Hibbert, Lou Reed and more.

"They come to us and some bring material that you can't use," Carter said of how the group chooses whom to work with. "Sometimes it can be a secular song, and you can change just a few lyrics, and it becomes a gospel song."

It brought on a bit of a popular resurgence for the group, which originally formed at the Alabama Institute for the Negro Blind in 1939.

Perhaps the biggest beneficiary has been Harper, with whom the group recorded an entire album, "There Will Be a Light," in 2004. The Blind Boys had previously recorded a cover of Harper's "I Shall Not Walk Alone" on 2002's "Higher Ground."

But this past decade hasn't been all positive for the Blind Boys: Two founding members (George Scott and Johnny Fields)

"Sometimes it can be a secular song, and you can change just a few lyrics, and it becomes a gospel song."

died, and another founder (Clarence Fountain) limited his touring due to health concerns. Carter understands that his — and the group's other elder members' time to perform could be short.

"I would hope that when I go ... they will continue to carry the torch on," Carter said of the group's younger singers.

In the meantime, Carter has one message for audiences catching the group on the in concert: "We're going to try to make you feel something that you've never felt before."

Amen to that. RUDI GREENBERG (EXPRESS)

The Asylum Street Spankers' retro-folk gets a pious twist

Music

If 2009, with its steampunk dandies, mustachioed bartenders and tweedy chic, was the Year of the Retro-Victorian, then 2010 might be the Year of a Depressed American. The Asylum Street Spankers know that the only way to get through hard times is by making a joyous racket, and the Austin collective, inspired by the Tin Pan Alley tunes and tinkery-dink percussion of the early part of the last century, are a seven-headed good-time machine.

The Spankers hit Jammin' Java on Thursday night for a local stop on their "Salvation and Sin" tour. They'll tote a whole new sack of tunes from their latest, "God's Favorite Band," a live recording which edges away from the snark-tinged ragtime/vaudeville/washboard music for which they are beloved by hipsters and concentrates on traditional gospel and religious tunes. The band goes after these with as much gusto as it brings to its wackier repertoire. But fans of the funny needn't fear — the Spankers put on a ferociously entertaining show and are sure to toss in the tunes, asides and bad behavior that have made their live shows bucket-list staples for hipsters. ARION BERGER (EXPRESS)

'10 Things I Hate About You' still sings on a new anniversary DVD

DVD

Despite John Hughes' output 10 years before, the 1990s were the real heyday of the teen comedy. Starting with the snappily hilarious "Clueless" in 1995, the genre came into its own during latter half of the decade and reached a peak in 1999, when "She's All That," "American Pie" and "10 Things I Hate About You" brought adolescents to the cineplex in droves.

Many '90s teen movies found inspiration in literary sources, with which they engaged with playful knowingness. "10 Things" is a gloss on Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" and concerns the efforts of Patrick Verona (Heath Ledger) to court the rebellious Katarina "Kat" Stratford (Julia Stiles). The students study the bard's sonnets in their lit class, and one character (played by David Krumholtz) attends prom as Shakespeare himself. The characters toggle between '90s slang and Shakespearean dialogue — a clever trick that suggests adolescents have developed a very complex view of the world and their lessons.

"10 Things," which gets a 10th anniversary edition DVD release this week, is the directorial debut of Gil Junger, who sets and sustains a wry tone that enhances the characters' emotional conflicts.

This new edition has only a few paltry features, but the new making-of reveals how much comic relief he added to the script, including Krumholtz's disastrous motorcycle ride and an unfortunate arrow incident.

The real reason "10 Things" is remembered a decade after its release is the cast. Stiles gives her character's anger some much-needed specificity, and no movie has used Ledger's innate charms — those lively eyes and that easy smile — more effectively.

Of course, aspects of the movie haven't aged particularly well. Some of the fashions will strike new viewers as dated, especially a particularly hideous pink prom dress, and the soundtrack wasn't edgy even in '99, so it's especially lame in '10.

By far the best musical moment — and perhaps the film's best scene — is Ledger's infamous stadium serenade, when he sings "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You" and runs from a pair of hapless security guards. It may not be Shakespeare, but such effortless charisma never gets old.

Maggie Gyllenhaal and Jeff Bridges star in Scott Cooper's "Crazy Heart."

Bridges' Troubled Water

One of the greatest acting talents in America, Jeff Bridges, stars in "Crazy Hearts." First-time writer-director Scott Cooper's drama opens on Friday at the two local Landmark Theatres. Bridges plays Bad Blake, a washed-up country singer with mountains of talent and molehills of success, whose career limps along while that of his protegee (Colin Farrell) soars. Bad grasps for redemption in the form of aspiring journalist and single mother Maggie Gyllenhaal, and if it all sounds like hand-me-down Horton Foote, bear in mind that the film is generating Oscar buzz for Bridges. ► E Street Cinema, 555 11th St. NW; 202-452-7672. Bringing a Silent to Life

The National Gallery of Art celebrates the films of cinematic pioneer D.W. Griffith with one of its Ciné-Concerts. The 1925 silent film "Lady of the Pavements" screens to live accompaniment by composer and pianist Donald Sosin and vocalist Joanna Seaton. The film was Griffith's last of the silent era and stars the lovely Lupe Velez — then an ingenue and a promising Hollywood talent — as a prostitute who inveigles Prussian aristocrat William Boyd into marrying her. ► National Gallery of Art, East Building, 400 Constitution Ave. NW; Sat., 2 p.m., free; 202-842-6799, nga.gov. Legal Sea Foods turns up the heat with its New England clam chowder deal.

Legal's Liquid Pick-Me-Up

This year, Legal Sea Foods is celebrating its 60th birthday and its respect for soup by declaring Jan. 20 "Chowda Day." (It's only proper considering January is also national soup month.) In recognition of this new "Legal" holiday, all four of its area restaurants will serve up 60-cent bowls of New England clam chowder with the purchase of any entrée on Jan. 20 only. See legalseafoods.com for locations.

Give the Gift of Beer

The Belgian brewery Brouwerij de Musketiers did a solid for Robert Wiedmaier, concocting a special beer just for his restaurant Brasserie Beck. But starting mid-month, the brew, Antigoon, will be available in some local retail stores, so you can bring home the magic of Belgian beer and ancient myth — look for the bleeding giant on the label. Todd and Nicole Wiss bought the Mount Pleasant pizza place Radius and crafted a menu attentive to the seasons and locality of ingredients — but they still serve pizza.

A Fresh Formula

Organic, elegant fare is on the menu at the buffed-up Radius in Mount Pleasant

Pizza

If you want to find a cozy restaurant in Mount Pleasant with dishes made from local, organic and sustainable ingredients, look no further than the neighborhood joint Radius.

Even locals may not know that the reliable pizza place has been transformed into a stop for elegant, hearty fare — pizza and beyond — by new owners Todd and Nicole Wiss. The couple met while working at Poste Moderne Brassiere, where Todd was sous chef and Nicole was general manager. They discussed buying their own place, and the chance to buy Radius fell into their laps last year.

Todd, a native Washingtonian, said that he became conscious about local and sustainable ingredients while working with Robert Weland at Poste. Todd makes pastas and sausages in the restaurant, and ingredients come from local farms.

Pizza takes center stage, and Nicole, who works the front of the house, said it's been "really fun melding the pizza concept with the things we hold true to our hearts."

pizza," Todd added. This means pies like the winter pizza, an unusual but delicious combination of celery root puree, toasted pine nuts, parsnips and feta.

The drink list is as thoughtful as the menu. Nicole put together a list of five red and five white wines, a list she calls "fun and approachable, but somewhat challenging."

The bar features NFL games on two large televisions, or "Cash Cab" during happy hour. Radius' happy hour lasts until 7 p.m., and a slice of cheese pizza and any draft pint for goes for $5. On Wednesdays, get a free bottle of wine with the purchase of a large pizza and an appetizer or two entrees and an appetizer. AMY CAVANAUGH

JUSTIN LUBIN/NBC

Agent of Change

You know that nervous feeling when you've been apart from a dear pal and a reunion is coming. Like, what if we don't click? That's the dilemma facing TV viewers in January, as old faves return after a hiatus. Will "Big Love" be as weirdly loveable? Will "24" still make your heart monitor beat faster?

By Marc Silver

"American Idol" – Paula Abdul + Ellen DeGeneres = ???

And then there's "Chuck," whose fans fought to forestall cancellation. The hero is an endearing nerd who became a bumbling spy after a computer dumped secrets into his brain. (P.S. An NIH scientist told me this could not happen in real life. Sad.)

At its best, the show juggles spy spoofery, genuine chills, geek jokes and unfulfilled love. Only at the end of Season 2, Chuck got a new brain boost granting kung fu powers. His romance seemed due to bud. Reboots like this can wreck a show. Indeed, the Season 3 premiere, on Sunday, has an off-putting start. There is a confusing plot. There is an unappealing beard. There are way too many cheese balls. Yet everyone ends up where they ought to be. The NBC show returns to its regular timeslot Jan. 11. Chuck, you are still my Monday at 8 TV date.

A Monstrous 'Animal'

Ke$ha's debut album is packed with trite lyrics and beastly, unbearable beats

CD Review

If you need just one reason to blow off white-girl rapper Ke$ha's debut album, "Animal," then take another look at her name and the dollar sign in it.

Need more? Then suffer through "Animal." After that, you'll most likely swear off the aspiring pop star for good.

Ke$ha's single, "TiK ToK," hit No. 1 on the Jan. 2 Billboard chart, making it the first top-seated song of the new year, and her 14-track debut offers up the same kind of annoyingly immature, deeply irritating and horrendously repetitive bunk. With far too many songs about getting trashed and being obsessively infatuated with guys (most of whom wear "tight rocker jeans" and have disdainful girlfriends), the album is defined by Ke$ha's poor rhymes and unbearably frustrating electronica beats.

Sure, Ke$ha — whose real name, Kesha Rose Sebert, is far more bearable — co-wrote every track on "Animal," but is that really something to brag about? Among other things, the album's lyrics encourage party-goers to "lose your clothes in the crowd," command boys to "stop talking" so she can get naked faster, and use the phrase "hot mess" far too often. Both the album's party songs and ballad-attempts suffer from amateur songwriting and structural choices, and the result is a solid 50-minute wall of inadequacy.

'Animal' Ke$ha

If you're looking for any redeeming qualities at all in "Animal," give up. Even the songs that follow the formula of "TiK ToK" are excruciatingly bad, as seen best in "Blah Blah Blah," a track featuring emo-electronica duo 3OH!3, the dudes behind that wildly offensive "Shush girl, shut your lips/Do the Helen Keller/And talk with your hips" line from the hit single "Don't Trust Me." From the embarrassingly trite lyrics to the "Nintendo"-like beat, the song is a brain-numbingly infuriating example of how bad Ke$ha can be. Blah blah blah, indeed.

ROXANA HADADI

True Story

Proud of Her Naughty Self

If there's one person who can't find fault with her shallow sentiment-filled, Autotune-overloaded album, it's Miss Ke$ha herself. In fact, the wannabe diva seems proud that the liquor-soaked accounts of partying and excess are actually real accounts. "I'm excited about it because it kind of accurately documents my life over the past four years," she told MTV News. "It's all really honest." (EXPRESS)

Winter Fuel

Stay in and serve yourself a heapin' helpin' of 'Meatballs'

DVD Review

With the holiday season behind us and more freezing days ahead, many of us already are desperate for ammunition in the annual fight against the winter doldrums. Enter, thankfully, "Cloudy With a Chance of Meat-balls," the relentlessly delightful animated film that brings a much-needed burst of gleeful, spaghetti-storming whimsy today to DVD ($29 single-disc edition, $35 two-disc edition) and Blu-ray ($40 for Blu-ray/DVD combo pack).

Based loosely on the 1978 children's book by Judi and Ron Barret, the story depicts the wondrous delights (and inevitable disaster) that come to the island of Swallow Falls when inventor Flint Lockwood (voice of Bill Hader) creates a machine that lets it rain an array of taste sensations — pancakes! cheeseburgers! donuts, with sprinkles! — upon the ever-hungry populace.

The two-disc DVD and the Blu-ray editions make a point of celebrating all that food-flurrying fun.
Both versions come with Flint's Food Fight Game, a diversion that's sort of a cross between Asteroids and Space Invaders, with pieces

Flint Lockwood, voiced by Bill Hader, goes outside with his mouth open wide.

of pie and burgers subbing in for the encroaching aliens. A series of progression reels smartly and succinctly allow visual effects supervisor Rob Bredow to demonstrate the layers of artwork and computer trickery involved in making the movie's storm clouds look convincing. And exclusively on the Blu-ray, fans will find the totally unnecessary but nonetheless addictive "splat mode," a feature that allows viewers to hit a button and sling animated eggs, cupcakes, meatballs and pie all over the screen.

As for the less expensive, single-disc DVD, it boasts only a bait-and-switch piece with the enticing title "Make It Rain Food!" and the reasonably engaging commentary track with directors Christopher Miller and Phil Lord, as well as Hader. Not a bad option if you're trying to pinch pennies. But if not, consider succumbing to the temptation to wallow in splat mode.

Horoscope

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You don't want to let a secret catch up with you. Do what you can to conceal that which is necessary to hide at this moment, but not everything.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You can expect a disruption to be only temporary. Once this trouble has passed, you can be back on track in little time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Distractions are welcome early in the day, but once you have decided on a clear course of action, you'll want to remain focused.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The simpler you can communicate, the better. There's no reason to overcomplicate that which is complicated enough.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can combine business and pleasure in a new and original way, but always be sure that your intentions are clear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Saving energy can be the key to a successful day — and week. Know when it's time to give yourself a break and take care of yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Some may be eager to follow your lead, and others more resistant. You'll do what you must and let others decide for themselves.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's one thing to have strong opinions, and it's another altogether to criticize the opinions of others. Embrace one; avoid the other.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll find that a little seclusion serves you well as you attempt to make sense of a complicated personal issue.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll want to have things ready as quickly as possible so that you can make the strongest possible start when the time comes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You needn't fear anything new at this time. Ultimately, you'll have some important choices to make, but for now you can explore all options.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Start slowly, and let momentum build organically throughout the day. The moment you begin forcing things, trouble begins as well.
